

Journey to Tibet

The Forbidden Kingdom

In 1934 two young men, one Russian and one American, set off from Shanghai on the long journey to Tibet. Their plan was to construct a boat in Tibet and paddle back down the Yangtse River from Tibet to Shanghai. The story of their river expedition and their experiences in the remote, forbidden land of Tibet is an amazing tale of adventure.

Their simple Kodak Brownie box camera captured rare images of a unique and fascinating country and culture that is now lost forever.

Nadia O'Carroll will present the story and photographs of her father's year in Tibet
